

Saved people serve people.

A reputable study disclosed that the higher a person climbs the ladder of success the less compassion they feel. I'm not certain why this is true, but this can certainly explain why some extremely capable people have advanced in their field only to destroy the company for lack of empathy, concern, and care for those beneath them.

No one is higher up the ladder than Jesus. By all rights, then, He should be the most insensitive to those below Him...which is everybody. But He chose to humble Himself and serve. (Philippians 2:1-8),

We follow in His steps. Regardless of how high or low we are on life's ladder, we choose to follow Jesus' example as well as His commands to serve others. That's what saved people do because that's what their Savior did.
